HOUSE OF LAUGHS

THE BEST LINES FROM THE WHITE HOUSE
CORRESPONDENTS' DINNER

WASHINGTON President Obama poked fun at the media, his critics and himself Saturday at the annual White House Correspondents' Association dinner, a star-filled event hosted by Conan O'Brien where journalists and celebrities mixed with the Washington elite. Here's some of the night's best lines. REUTERS

President Obama speaks during the White House Correspondents' Association Dinner on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

“My charm offensive has helped me learn some interesting things about what's going on in Congress—it turns out, absolutely nothing. —President Obama

These days, I look in the mirror and I have to admit, I'm not the strapping young Muslim socialist that I used to be. Time passes. You get a little gray. —President Obama

I know CNN has taken some knocks lately, but the fact is I admire their commitment to cover all sides of a story, just in case one of them happens to be accurate. —President Obama

I know Republicans are still sorting out what happened in 2012, but one thing they all agree on is they need to do a better job reaching out to minorities. And look, call me self-centered, but I can think of one minority they could start with. Hello? Think of me as a trial run, you know? —President Obama

To any U.S. senators here tonight, if you would like to switch either your dessert or your position on gay marriage, please signal a waiter. —Conan O'Brien

Like the president, I too, recently got in some hot water by talking about a public official's good looks. It was the time I wouldn't shut up about that stone cold fox, Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood. Oh man, I like the cut of his gih. —Conan O'Brien

I have a question, and I think some of you also have this question. It's been several months since you were re-elected, sir, so I'm curious, why are you still sending everyone five emails a day asking for more money? You won. Do you have a gambling problem we don't know about? Did you put it all on Gonzaga? You did, didn't you? He did! —Conan O'Brien

“When you think about it the president and I are a lot alike. We both went to Harvard. We both have two children and we both told Joe Biden we didn't have extra tickets for tonight's event. —Conan O'Brien

We didn't elect the sex police

Stephen Markley

As the battle for marriage equality ratchets up, one of the treasured conservative counter arguments is that allowing gays and lesbians to marry will lead down a slippery slope to polygamy. Cool!

Plural marriage—or any other kind of arrangement between consenting adults—obviously will come next, and rightly so. The argument that the “institution of marriage” is some special compact with which we cannot tamper has little historical grounding. The idea of two partners forming an equal union of love and mutual respect is basically an invention of the last 50-75 years. Prior to that, marriage was more about combining land-based property holdings and enrolling women into indentured servitude for the rest of their lives while men carried on sexual relationships with whomever they pleased.

There's always the knock that polygamy is sexist and exploitative of women, but then again, regular marriage can be too. Or that it's harmful to children, but again, regular marriage can be too. Or that it's the practice of crazy religious subjects, but there also are plenty of weird religious people in standard marriages.

As Jillian Keenan pointed out in Slate, there is no practical argument against polygamy—or rather, every argument against it could also be an argument against your own parents' marriage. Secular plural relationships are already far more pervasive than anyone's letting on; they just exist in the shadows, much the way homosexual relationships did for a long time.

You're probably saying, “Markley, you're just trying to normalize polygamy so you can get started on putting a harem together. You're just like every other man fantasizing about marrying his cake and then marrying some more cake and then having big group cake parties where you eat lots and lots of cake (and probably you'll need some Gatorade).”

To those critics, I'd say that my crippling commitment issues will severely challenge my getting married to one woman, let alone multiple. Also, Olivia Wilde is getting married, so now becoming a brother-husband is my only shot.

My beef is with this club of societal police who talk about freedom this and liberty that except when it comes to sexual relationships, in which case they want government intrusion and regulation of our activities until the only thing anyone is allowed to do is marry at 18 and get it on missionary-style through a hole cut in a bedsheet. (Admittedly, that's hotter than it sounds.)

Take two wives! Take four husbands! Take a wife and a husband! Get together with two other couples in one house and just trade each others' genitals and bathroom cleaning duties! You don't want to pay for children's health insurance or universal preschool, but somehow it's acceptable for the government to act as a moral arbiter of consenting relationships between adults in order to promote the family? We only live once, and bone cancer is a thing, so all we should care about is finding another person(s) who makes us happy.

That's why the fight over marriage equality is part of a longer tradition that still is ongoing: It's about getting the institution of government out of playing the role of sexual beat cop all together.

“The argument that the ‘institution of marriage’ is some special compact with which we cannot tamper has little historical grounding.

'Persons of interest' sought in bombing

BOSTON Congressional intelligence leaders said Sunday that authorities are pursuing "persons of interest" in the U.S. in connection with the Boston Marathon bombings, and asked for more help from Russian spy agencies.

Congressman Mike Rogers (R-Mich.), the Republican chairman of the House of Representatives intelligence committee, said better cooperation from Russia was needed in Washington's probe of the two suspected bombers' recent contacts and activities.

Speaking on ABC's "This Week," Rogers said he believed that Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, the elder of two ethnic Chechen brothers suspected of carrying out the April 15 blasts, clearly changed during his visit to Russia in 2012, becoming "radicalized."

"I think [Russia has] information that would be incredibly helpful and that they haven't provided yet," he said. New details of the unfolding investigation emerged following reports Saturday that Tamerlan Tsarnaev spoke to his mother about "jihad" in a 2011 phone call secretly recorded by Russian officials.

Authorities learned of the wiretapped discussion between Tsarnaev and his mother, Zubeidat Tsarnaeva, within the last few days, CBS News reported. Tsarnaev died in an April 18 shootout with police, three days after the bombings that killed three people and injured more than 260 others.

"We still have persons of interest that we're working to find and identify and have conversations with," Rogers said.

U.S. searching for Syrian poison source

U.S. intelligence agencies unanimously agree that Syrians have been exposed to deadly sarin gas in recent weeks, but they are divided over how certain they can be that the Syrian regime is to blame, U.S. and congressional officials said Friday.

CONVERTING THE UNITED CENTER FROM ICE TO HARDWOOD IS NO LAYUP

For the Bulls and Blackhawks to share the floor at the United Center, it takes a choreographed conversion from ice to hardwood and back again—something that happened 26 times by the end of the Bulls' regular season. Once a Blackhawks game ends, the crew of 45 springs to action, changing the playing surface in about two hours. Transforming it back to ice takes a little less time. Throughout the season, the ice remains in place as insulation and then the basketball surface are layered on top. And now that both teams are in the playoffs, the arena's crew can't afford any mistakes. Besides the Blackhawks and Bulls, the United Center is reconfigured to accommodate other events such as concerts, rodeos and conventions. Here's how it's done. TRADUNG

Raise the netting

Netting to deflect flying pucks surrounds the goal ends of the ice rink. They are immediately raised when the game ends. This clears the way for workers to access the rink.

Remove the glass

All 152 pieces of acrylic glass are removed by hand and stored on carts. Each piece is numbered. The four corner areas of the boards (dashers) then are removed to allow personnel and equipment to enter. The other parts of the boards stay in place during basketball games.

Switch the seats

Similar to bleachers in a school gymnasium, the seat sections on the west and east ends fold up on wheels to make room for equipment and personnel. The seats collapse and are rotated, with one side for hockey and one side for basketball.

Cover the ice

540 pieces of insulated plywood are carted out and laid down by hand directly over the ice, covering it completely. The decking boards are made of Polyfibre that keeps the ice cold, the court warm and is durable enough to walk on. Stacks of decking are removed from carts and fit together, filling in the rink circumference.

THIS SEASON AT THE UC: BLACKHAWKS AND BULLS HOME GAMES

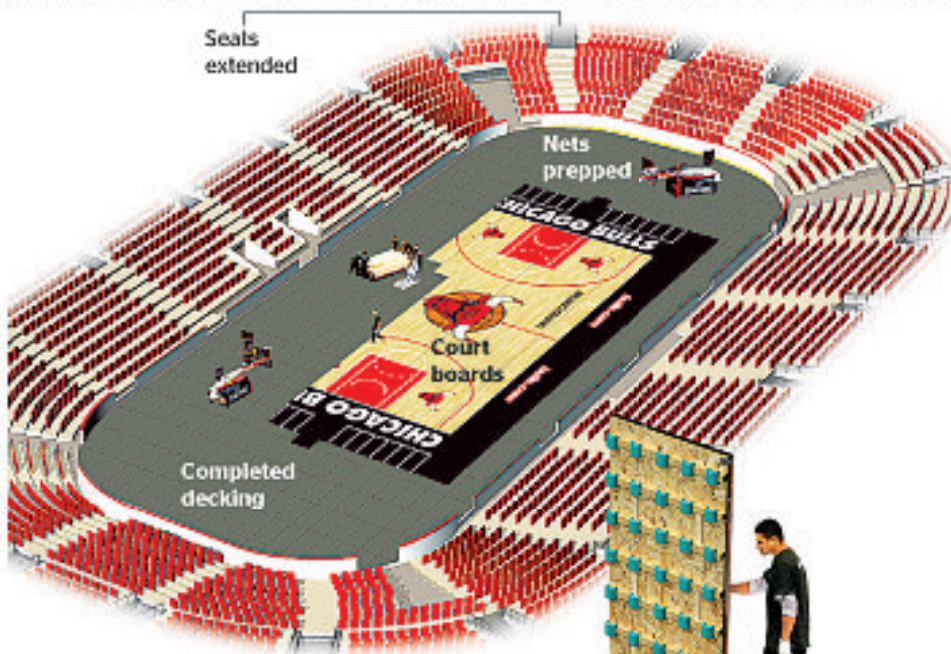

■ Blackhawks ■ Bulls ■ Other ice events ■ Other basketball events

25 STAFF MEMBERS

20 TEMP-SERVICE WORKERS

Put down the court boards

The Bulls' court has 232 sections. They are carted out and manually laid down. The boards are staggered and lock together with a tongue, groove and latch system, similar to a wood floor in a home. The first row of boards is squared using chalk lines and bracing boards. Once the first two or three rows are laid out, the rest of the floor can be assembled quickly.

Spacer boards underneath allow air to flow, preventing condensation from forming from the ice.

THE FINISHING TOUCHES

Before the basketball game begins, workers need an additional few hours for running cables, wires and electronics for broadcast, as well as basic housekeeping.

Raise the nets

The electric rigs with the hoop, net and shot clock are brought out with a forklift and prepped before the court is completed. Once the nets are up and secured, the conversion basically is finished and the players can practice on the court.

Set up extra seats

Sections of extra seats on the west and east ends are put into place. About 1,000 courtside folding chairs are set up on all sides.

MEET THE NEW BEARS

By Matt Lindner FOR REDEYE

Three linebackers, two offensive linemen and a wide receiver walk into Halas Hall ... hoping to change the course of football history in Chicago.

The Bears' newest draft class arrives with lofty expectations and daunting challenges at each position. It is composed of three guys (linebackers Jon Bostic, Khaseem Greene and Cornelius Washington) hoping to make fans forget about the franchise icon they're trying to replace; two (offensive linemen Kyle Long and Jordan Mills) who are hoping to prevent Kristin Cavallari from becoming a widow before her 30th birthday once she and Jay Cutler make it down the aisle; and another (wide receiver Marquess Wilson) looking to be a credible deep threat alongside Brandon Marshall.

But as anyone who has moved to the city knows, it's not easy being the new guy in town.

Nobody knows you, you don't know anybody, and let's face it, Chicago can be intimidating. You're going to get to know a lot more about these guys both on and off the field in the coming days.

But how well do you know them right now?

Test your knowledge below with some fun facts about the newest Bears.

GAME OF CHANCE

RIISING STAR HAS HIS OWN TAKE ON CHICAGO'S RAP SCENE

By Ernest Wilkins

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

The breakout success of the Chicago rap scene last year—headlined by the buzz and controversy of Chief Keef—exposed America to new faces creating sounds unfamiliar to the current rap landscape. Played-out narratives of cars, women and money were replaced with introspective tales of family, friends and dangerous surroundings.

Enter Chancelor Bennett of Chatham, who raps under the keep-it-simple-stupid moniker Chance the Rapper. With his 2012 mixtape “#10DAY, Bennett carved a very specific path that both takes part in and contrasts with the drill-scene stereotype of Chicago that is perpetuated throughout the rest of the country.

He has released a number of tracks from his mixtape “Acid Rap,” out Tuesday, and is fielding the kind of label bidding war that has come to define the modern rap scene. Young lyricists release a song or mixtape, exhibit a little Internet savvy and find themselves deluged with mainstream attention alarmingly quickly. His unorthodox rap style and nasal flow make him a standout, especially when compared to other rap acts on the rise like Joey BadA$$ and Casey Veggies, whose deliveries are more traditional.

His growing stardom has expanded his reach to audiences and media outside Chicago.

“Chance had a lot of buzz last year,” says David Drake of Complex magazine. “But I definitely think there was maturity in his tracks like [new mixtape single] “Juice” that people outside the city bought into immediately. As soon as that video dropped, it seemed like interest in him just popped across the country. In reality, there was a lot of groundwork—opening for Childish Gambino, building up local buzz. But I think people were waiting for him to deliver on the promise, and once that video appeared, it was game over.”

Chance the Rapper performs last month at SXSW in Austin, Texas
MIKE RICH/REDEYE FILE

RedEye sat down with the 20-year-old rising rap superstar (who will be at Lolla this summer) to pick his brain about his performance style, his unusual influences and the state of Chicago hip-hop.

SEE HIM

Chance the Rapper appears at the “Acid Rap” release party 5 p.m. Tuesday at Jugernaut (427 S. Dearborn Ave.). Free.

I was in the crowd at your SXSW set. The performance was ... weird. Rap shows aren't usually known for rambunctious energy and audience participation past the usual tactic of pointing at the crowd and yelling, “Make some noooooise!”

Why do you feel like rappers don't feel the need to bring energy to stage performances?

I think certain people aren't into performing, honestly. There are many aspects to being a musician and I think that some people don't focus on [live performing] as much. I just happen to come from a background where I grew up watching James Brown and Michael Jackson, Kanye West. Just a lot of musicians who have had a big stage presence, and that's something I've always tried to make visible in my sets.

I've noticed that you're embracing your growing popularity through social media and things like showing up at high schools to meet fans. Is that something that's important to you as a performer?

I mean, the grassroots connection I have with my fans is something that I've wanted as a fan. I mean, I've never met Kanye. For me, it's like every fan wants to meet their favorite artists and laugh and take pictures and talk. As soon as I got to a point where there were people I didn't know who knew my music, and me, I wanted to meet them and break down barriers like the Internet. I'm a real person, you know?

You've been outspoken about supporting other Chicago rappers, name-dropping them in songs and giving them shout-outs in interviews. Growing up here, I never saw local rappers really supporting each other. Are Chicago rappers now more unified as a whole?

Definitely. The reason why Chicago music wasn't succeeding back in the day is because there was no community. Even more than that, there was no business behind it. Chicago rap shows used to consist of 15 acts. It's a “showcase.” You have to pay to perform, you only get four minutes ... it wasn't legitimate. It was the radio too; the DJs didn't want to play local music. The newspapers would call everyone a “local rapper,” and it took this new Chicago movement that started with Keef to change that. That's why I'm always shouting him out. He came in and was the face of Chicago for a good amount of time and it made people take notice of the culture of Chicago, not just rap but the violence and the schools shutting down.

How do those things and the culture of the city in general affect you as an artist? You're a direct link to these kids; hell, you ARE one of these kids. They listen to your music. They wear the same clothes.

It makes me want to watch what I say, you know? Not like censoring myself, but making sure what I say means something. Be it positive or negative, everything I say can have an influence on a group of people. Everything going on in Chicago affects me as an artist, but it also affects me personally. I'm from here. I live here. I just turned 20. I know a lot of dudes that didn't. It's cool because I get to sit up in this office and talk about it, but I can't seriously explain to you how scary it is going into the summer. You know what it is when it gets hot in Chicago. A lot of kids don't come back from summer break, you know?

Have you personally experienced that?

Yeah, man. I mean, I went to a good high school where a majority of the kids weren't from the South Side or West Side, but grade school or middle school. You work a summer job and there are kids that don't come back to work the next day. This [bleep] is like this: If you live in Chicago, you know someone that got shot or died. That's just how it is. A lot of places aren't like that ... It's really [bleeped] up.

Laura Linney and Gabriel Basso in 'The Big C'

The end is near

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» cwwagner@tribune.com
» @showpatrol

"The Big C" was never going to surprise us with a happy ending. Even though the hard-hitting drama often was lighthearted as it charted high-school teacher Cathy Jamison's battle with stage IV melanoma, it never gave us false hope as her condition steadily worsened.

So consider the following spoiler-free: The final season, called "The Big C: Hereafter" and packaged in four hourlong episodes, doesn't present the end of Cathy's journey through rose-colored glasses.

As Cathy (Laura Linney) continues to deal with death on her terms, she struggles to keep her sanity as her body slowly fails her. She makes decisions about her care that leave her family flummoxed, not least of which is moving to a hospice facility. She confronts her estranged father (Brian Dennehy) and sets the groundwork for her son, husband, brother and friends to go on without her.

She tries to find a new wife for Paul (Oliver Platt) through an internet dating service. She

The Big C: Hereafter
9 p.m. Monday, Showtime encourages friend Andrea (Gabourey Sidibe) to succeed at fashion school and inspires her brother, Sean (John Benjamin Hickey), to make a sacrifice of his own.

Cathy's big goal is to see her son, Adam (Gabriel Basso), graduate from high school. She pushes him to make his grades while pushing herself to hold on. Basso is a revelation this season, matching the power and dignity of Linney's incredible performance.

Cancer isn't a subject ripe for comedy, but "The Big C" always has managed to find humor in tough, sad situations. With "Hereafter," creators Darlene Hunt and Jenny Bicks, Linney and the cast and crew continue to guide viewers through treacherous territory many people may refuse to consider.

These final episodes overflow with love, compassion and one lesson we all can take to heart: Cathy lived.

We may know how Cathy's story ends, but her journey there is full of surprises.

Eddie McClintock in 'Warehouse 13'

Eddie McClintock waits for 'Warehouse' renewal

MCT

The Syfy series "Warehouse 13" currently is not in production. But there's still work to be done.

Eddie McClintock, who plays investigator Pete Lattimer on the series, said in a recent telephone chat that "I've been working diligently on my Twitter and Facebook page to rally the troops for the coming premiere."

That premiere is at 9 p.m. Monday on Syfy, and it comes with as big a mystery as the supernatural ones the show looks into: Why hasn't "Warehouse" been picked up for a fifth season?

The run of episodes beginning Monday is, according to Syfy, a continuation of the show's fourth season. The first part began in July 2012 and ran for 10 episodes before the show went on pause from October until now, when 10 more episodes will air. When the network ordered those 20 episodes, it said the first 10 would be the fourth season and the others would be saved, presumably for a fifth. Now it's all one season.

That could just be a money-saving move; if the latest run was counted as a fifth season, the cast was due a raise. But it remains confusing for viewers, who had a long wait between telecasts, and the people making the show, who face uncertainty after several secure seasons.

Monday's telecast picks up where the series left off, with a plague unleashed on the earth and warehouse supervisor Artie [Saul Rubinek] stabbed. The other members of the warehouse team will have to deal with those crises—but there are plenty more to come in the ensuing telecasts.

"I feel like we're still doing great work," McClintock said. "I feel like there's a lot more to be done with the show. The dark tone that it took at the end [of last year's telecasts] doesn't overpower the premiere or the following episodes."

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Taurus April 20-May 20

You'll express affection in crazy and creative ways, thanks to romantic Venus. Or you'll write your partner an erotic note describing all the lusty activities you've planned for the evening.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Your friends are trying to set you up with someone. Your parents expect instant grandkids. All of this is making you queasy. The moon is reminding you it's OK to remain independent and single.

Cancer June 22-July 22

With the moon opposite your sign, you're wondering where your sexual mojo went. Nobody will look you in the eye. Don't panic; this will soon pass.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Money matters are on your mind. Extravagant Fire signs like you need extra cash flow to maintain a sexy wardrobe and keep up with buying the latest gadgets. Unfortunately, recent events have made this difficult.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

A shaky moon has you wondering if your relationship has staying power. Don't misinterpret a minor glitch as a catastrophe. It doesn't really matter if your girlfriend ran into her former flame at the grocery store.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

With Mercury opposite your sign, you'll find it difficult to properly express yourself. You'll accidentally tell your boyfriend that yes, you do find his father terrifying.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Don't make any sudden moves. Since four signs are opposite yours, you're feeling odd. You're wondering if you should start dating a professional football player or NFL cheerleader.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Your romantic partner might want to lay down some rules, and you'll have none of it. Don't take it personally if your sweetheart freaks out about your housecleaning habits.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You and your honey will hit a comfortable groove as the moon brings you some flirty fun. Whether you're staying at home, taking a hike or bike ride, or traveling, you'll enjoy being together.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Sometimes relationships drag you down. As an Air sign, you prefer to be a free agent. Venus is reminding you that dealing with a romantic partner is time consuming, annoying and frequently exhausting. If you're in one, you might want to end it.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You're focused on building something. Saturn has you in nesting mode, and you're determined to make your love life more stable.

Aries March 21-April 19

Mercury is putting you in one of your "woo is me" moods. You're feeling sorry for yourself because your best friend is married with kids and you're just married with cats.

SHOW'S RENEWAL IS GOOD NEWS FOR THE CAST AND THE CITY

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @aboutluisgomez

It's difficult to tell who should be more excited that NBC officially picked up "Chicago Fire" for a second season Friday: the cast and crew of the firefighter drama or the Illinois Film Office.

The good news allows the show to concentrate on developing cliffhangers that will bring viewers back for Season 2, not to mention it provides the cast and crew, including stars Taylor Kinney and Jesse Spencer, job security beyond this season.

"It was really unnerving," executive producer Danielle Gelber said Saturday over the phone. "... It felt like we were really doing well for the network. I figured we had a good chance to come back, but you never want to assume anything."

Spencer, on the other hand, claimed he wasn't too nervous about the show's future.

"I knew we'd get picked up and didn't worry about it," Spencer said over the phone Sunday.

"I already booked my apartment for next [season] without having the official word. That shows how confident I was, like 'We'll get it.' Our show has been very steady for NBC and done well in its time slot. We've built up a core audience over the past year."

For the Illinois Film Office, the news marks the first time a network series filmed entirely in-state will be picked up for a second season since Fox's "Prison Break" in 2006. Fox's "The Chicago Code" was canceled after one season while NBC's "The Playboy Club" was canceled after three episodes in 2011.

"It means a lot for us—most importantly, jobs," Illinois Film Office managing director Betsy Steinberg said Saturday by email. "The spending a show like this does in just one season usually exceeds even a large motion picture."

"So economically speaking, the news of Season 2 is downright excellent."

As reported in the Tribune, "Chicago Fire" could have a spinoff next season. The show would revolve around police officers introduced at the end of this season. Gelber said they should know by mid-May if the show will be picked up.

Navy Pier's Ferris wheel

'DIVERGENT' UPDATE

If you're wondering why Navy Pier closed early Friday, it's because the sci-fi movie "Divergent" was filming. The shoot involved Navy Pier's Ferris wheel, which was made to look significantly rustier to reflect the film's post-apocalyptic setting.

Taylor Swift really knows how to seal the deal. The country crooner recently bought a $17 million mansion in Rhode Island—and paid cash, tmz.com reports. What does that buy her? The Kickstarter for Braff's "Garden State" followup, "Wish I Was Here," reached its $2 million goal over the weekend, with more than 30,000 people donating so far. Braff wrote in his project proposal that pitching the movie to a major studio "would have involved making a lot of sacrifices I think would have ultimately hurt the film," which is why he took the Web funding route.
